SCF Orientation Comes Here

Future State College of Florida students learn about schedules, campus life and the three campuses during an on-site orientation Wednesday with Jessica Souza.

Waiting on the wait list...

The news is not EXACTLY what a student expects. Instead of a welcome email from a college, the message contains a strange word: waitlisted. Does this mean that as soon as enrollment deposits roll in for accepted students, the status will change? How long is the list?

According to a recent report from NPR, waitlisted students have approximately a 3 percent chance of getting into their school. The odds differ for each school, but the amount of students who are waitlisted far outweighs the amount of acceptances. The University of Michigan offered 11,127 students waitlist spots in 2017. Of the 4,124 who accepted, only 470 actually got in.

About 40 percent of schools in the U.S. waitlist. College counselors recommend that students explore schools to which they have been accepted. Also, look at schools with rolling deadlines. It's okay to check back for waitlist updates but don't miss important scholarship deadlines waiting, waiting, waiting...
